

WEDDING CEREMONY

We are here together today as witnesses of the marriage of Darian and Alex. The state of marriage is a serious one, and is not to be entered into unadvisedly or lightly. One must be aware of its joys, its burdens, its privileges, and its obligations. Yes.

We ask that Darian and Alex may cherish a mutual esteem and love, bear with each other's shortcomings and weaknesses, strengthen each other in sickness, trouble, and sorrow.

I would ask you both, as you stand in the presence of these witnesses, to remember that no other vows are more worthy of one's total commitment than those which you now assume.

Will you, Alex, have this man to be your wedded husband, to live together in the companionship of marriage and will you love him, comfort him, honor and keep him, in sickness and in health?

Will you, Darian, have this man to be your wedded husband, to live together in the companionship of marriage and will you love him, comfort him, honor and keep him in sickness and in health?

THE VOWS

Please turn to one another, join hands and repeat after me:

I, Alex, take you Darian, to be my wedded husband, to have and to hold, from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, for as long as we both shall live.

I, Darian, take you Alex, to be my wedded husband, to have and to hold, from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, for as long as we both shall live.

Darian, please repeat after me:

With this ring I thee wed, and I pledge to you my love.

Alex, please take the ring and place it on Darian' finger and repeat after me:

With this ring I thee wed, and I pledge to you my love.

THE PRONOUNCEMENT

In as much as Darian and Alex have agreed to live together in the state of marriage, and have celebrated the same before these witnesses, and thereto have given their intentions to each other, and have declared the same by joining hands and by giving and receiving rings, by the authority vested in me by this state, I now pronounce you husband and husband.

You may now kiss.
