Good morning.

Does your court strictly enforce the rule that a multi-member LLC must have an attorney represent the LLC?

Hi Dan:

Thank you for all of your responses.

Since they aren't allowed an attorney in small claims, do we give them an exception?

It was always explained to me that the small claims arena is an exception to the rule that an LLC has to use an attorney.

So another words;

In General Civil they have to use an attorney

In Small Claims, they can not use an attorney

It all depends on where the case is filed.

Please refer to Magistrate Manual Section 7.6 regarding attorneys in small claims division. In general civil division it is well established in Michigan (and U.S.) that corporations are required to be represented by licensed attorneys in general civil, district and circuit. See MCL 450.681.
